

THE DEATH OF THE OSCAR MAYER WIENER GIRL

From state to state I rode atop the burnished bun and crouched in the hot dog shell where I sweltered six years. Far from my hometown prom queen crown,
I lived in this uniform, polyester glazed with grease.
When I died, they buried me in a coffin lined with mustard.